

Black Electrical

Designed by Sean Fermoyle & Ray Noland

Fyll Character Set

abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ

1234567890#%&$£¥¢ + = © ® ☒

.,;:~^()0-iz!?)})

 $\Lambda_{\langle \rangle} || - - - \dots - \bullet \bullet \S \P ff \dagger \#$

À Á Â Ã Ä Å Æ Ç È É Ê Ë Ì Í Î Ï Ñ Ò

ÇÒÓÔÕÖØŒÛÜÚÛÜÿŸŷ

à á â ã ä å æ ç è é ê ë ì í î ï ã

àáâãäåæçøœƒǰǫǵǶǷǹǻǼǿǾ

~ <> >< x÷ «» ^

Specimens

---

In 2020, the Chicago Graphic Design Club, which was originally named The Chicago Design Book Club, was formed as a way to build community amidst the 2020 global pandemic. Our initial focus was to explore the meaning of our design practices and ways in which design could be used as an agent of change. Shortly thereafter, we introduced lectures to our programming by welcoming notable designers, such as Ellen Lupton, Jessica Helfand, Gail Anderson, Carlos Segura, and Barnbrook Studio to share with us their design processes and stories. Since then, we've extended our reach by providing our communities the opportunity to tour Chicago-based design studios, participate in art exhibitions, learn from others, and more. In 2022, we launched Underscore, our podcast, and in 2023, we hosted our first art exhibition and panel discussion series. We continuously seek ways to collaborate with community leaders and engage in critical conversations about the role of graphic design.

8/10

In 2020, the Chicago Graphic Design Club, which was originally named The Chicago Design Book Club, was formed as a way to build community amidst the 2020 global pandemic. Our initial focus was to explore the meaning of our design practices and ways in which design could be used as an agent of change. Shortly thereafter, we introduced lectures to our programming by welcoming notable designers, such as Ellen Lupton, Jessica Helfand, Gail Anderson, Carlos Segura, and Barnbrook Studio to share with us their design processes and stories. Since then, we've extended our reach by providing our communities the opportunity to tour Chicago-based design studios, participate in art exhibitions, learn from others, and more. In 2022, we launched Underscore, our podcast, and in 2023, we hosted our first art exhibition and panel discussion series. We continuously seek ways to collaborate with community leaders and engage in critical conversations about the role of graphic design.

12/14

In 2020, the Chicago Graphic Design Club, which was originally named The Chicago Design Book Club, was formed as a way to build community amidst the 2020 global pandemic. Our initial focus was to explore the meaning of our design practices and ways in which design could be used as an agent of change. Shortly thereafter, we introduced lectures to our programming by welcoming notable designers, such as Ellen Lupton, Jessica Helfand, Gail Anderson, Carlos Segura, and Barnbrook Studio to share with us their design processes and stories. Since then, we've extended our reach by providing our communities the opportunity to tour Chicago-based design studios, participate in art exhibitions, learn from others, and more.

18/20

In 2020, the Chicago Graphic Design Club, which was originally named The Chicago Design Book Club, was formed as a way to build community amidst the 2020 global pandemic. Our initial focus was to explore the meaning of our design practices and ways in which design could be used as an agent of change.

24/26

In 2020, the Chicago Graphic Design Club, which was originally named The Chicago Design Book Club, was formed as a way to build community amidst the 2020 global pandemic.

36/40

Words

---

Chicago Graphic Design Club
Guest Design Speakers
Build Community Participate

Numbers

111
222
333
444
555
666
777
888
999
000

